Journey with Us.

Life is a Highway

Quite literally for us where we live right now life is a highway. Bumping along the African roads keeps us busy most of the time - this month more so than normal. We wandered around Kenya for most of it. Our first destination was our annual fall team retreat, which was up in the mountains in Kenya this year. We spent three days relaxing, getting to know each other a little bit better, praying for each other, reviewing our team mission statement and goals, and sharing stories from our lives. Our next destination was a family vacation on the coast of Kenya with two other families from our team. We spent a little over a week with that, came back home for a week, and then got back in the car for our next destination. We headed back to Kenya to do our monthly visit to the children's home in Kitale. We saw more of the African highway system during this month than anyone would really want to see, but it was good. Every one of our trips was good for one reason or another. We bonded with teammates, enjoyed not working, learned valuable lessons about culture, vehicles, and various other things, and got to work with the kids at the home. Life is a highway for us, there's always a new destination to reach and a new bend in the road, but we are thankful that we are able to serve the Lord in this life.■

Cultural Tid-Bits

If there is one thing we learned from this vacation, it is the importance of a reliable vehicle. The roads in East Africa are rough and quickly take a toll on cars. With this vacation, we were delayed two days because of vehicle problems. Mechanics, or a least somewhat good mechanics, are scarce. With as much as we travel, a good vehicle is not just a nicety, it is a requirement.

Family Vacation

We had a great vacation, got to see and experience a lot of new things, and like all vacations came home refreshed but exhausted. We went with two other families from our team to Turtle Bay Beach Resort in Watamu, Kenya.

We thoroughly enjoyed being pampered and not having a care in the world for an entire week. We also experienced a lot of Africa, both good and bad along the way. We had a blast seeing all the amazing wildlife, but did not enjoy the roads, random police stops, and cars breaking down a few times. Travel in Africa is definitely more difficult than it is in the States. By the end of it, what we wouldn't give for a McDonalds on the side of the road.

Here's a quick snap shot of what we saw on our vacation - a herd of zebras on the side of the road, smoke billowing from the car in front of us, 13 people in a 7 passenger vehicle, monkeys climbing around the gas station, millions of stars in the African sky, police men pulling us over for no good reason, an ostrich, awesome African landscape, the BEACH!!!, sunburn, lots of good food, the road again, wheels shaking and almost falling off the car in front of us, 11 people in a 7 passenger vehicle, 2 people on the side of the road with a broken down vehicle, Giraffes eating leaves about 30 feet away from us, 13 very exhausted people on the home stretch, massive potholes, HOME!!! ■
